Biographical / Historical Note

Charles H. Buck was born in Lexington, Kentucky in 1846. He served as a soldier in the Confederate Army during the Civil War under his brother Samuel H. Buck. After the war, Charles Buck settled in New Orleans to study law, but soon became involved in the cotton business. C. H. Buck worked at the post office, again under his brother Samuel. C. H. Buck was involved in the Battle at Liberty Place as a member of the White League against the Metropolitan Police and “carpet-bag” rule during the Reconstruction after the Civil War. Charles Buck died in August of 1934. (Charles H. Buck Collection, Louisiana Historical Collection)

Samuel H. Buck was born near Versailles, Kentucky in 1841. He served in the Civil War as a Colonel for the Confederate army. After the war, he settled in New Orleans and studied law. S. H. Buck went into business in the cotton trade and was the director general of the New Orleans world exposition. He was appointed postmaster of New Orleans. Samuel Buck was involved in the Battle at Liberty Place as commander of Section C of the White League against the Metropolitan Police and “carpet-bag” rule during the Reconstruction after the Civil War. Later in life, S. H. Buck lived in New York City where he founded the brokerage firm Samuel H. Buck & Company of New York. Samuel Buck died in Pelham Manor, New York in January of 1929. (Charles H. Buck Collection, Louisiana Historical Collection)

Acquisition Information

This collection was bought from and loaned from Miss Mamie Buck, daughter of Charles C. Buck, in 1934 and 35.

Notes

The documents in this collection pertain to two different people: Charles H. Buck and his brother, Samuel H. Buck. There is one item related to a Charles W. Buck, but he is not mentioned in any other articles and seems to be unrelated to the brothers.
